Carstairs Chinaman Held Up & Robbed

The owner of a Chinese restaurant at Carstairs was held up and robbed early Wednesday morning.

About midnight four men entered the restaurant, obtained rooms and later attacked the Chinaman, gagging him and tying him securely to a chair. They got away with about $20.00 in cash, a suit of clothes and other articles.

When passing the restaurant about 3 o'clock in the morning, Constable Paish heard the Chinaman making frantic efforts to free himself, but the bandits had got clear away. The constable immediately telephoned the police along the line, but up to going to press the men had not been traced.

The Chinaman stated that three of his assailants were armed with knives, the fourth carrying a revolver.

The "Beloved Bachelor."

Paul Lukas, one of Paramount's most popular featured players, has portrayed many and various roles in his career as a talkie actor. He has been an aviator, painter, diplomat, and sculptor.

In "The Beloved Bachelor" he is a man who is beloved of three women. The first is a French woman who has been model and inspiration for his earlier works of art. The second is an actress who, through a misunderstanding, suspects him of having a disonorable "past," and the third is the young daughter of the now deceased model.

The play is delightfully romantic, with Lukas' characterization bringing a romantic glamor to the action throughout, and with side-splitting comedy bits provided by Charlie Ruggles, of "Charlie's Aunt" fame, bringing a high levity in just the right spots.

This Paramount feature will be screened at the Opera House on Monday and Thursday next week.

Mayor Chambers Gets Threatening Letter!

The people of Didsbury were considerably stirred up on Friday and Saturday last, when it became known that Mr. H. W. Chambers had received a letter of extortion, together with a death threat.

The note received by the Mayor in his mail Friday demanded that $5,000 in $5 and $10 denominations be taken by him to the Rosebud bridge, one mile out of town on the main highway at 2 p.m. Saturday. In case there was no one on the bridge to receive the currency it was to be thrown into the ditch over the west side of the bridge. The note threatened death to the mayor in case he "queaked" to anyone.

Mr. Chambers got in touch with the police at once and was given police protection during Friday and Saturday. It was planned to set a trap for the extortioner.

At the appointed time, Roger Barrett, of Didsbury, dressed in some of the mayor's clothes, drove to the bridge and threw a parcel containing stolen money over the side as directed in the note. He was followed at a distance by other cars bearing armed men and police in plain clothes. On the hills surrounding the bridge were posted men with rifles and others with field glasses to witness the proceedings.

Shortly after the plant had been made, Alex Currie, a former Didsbury resident, came down the hill east of the bridge to the gravel road north of the bridge and started to walk south and across the bridge, where he was picked up and accepted a ride from Dr. J. L. Clarke, who was driving into town.

It is reported that Currie had been under observation for some time and had acted in a peculiar manner. He was afterwards arrested as a suspect, taken to Rosebud and brought before Magistrate Gordon, who remanded him until Saturday. The case will be brought before the magistrate at Olds on Saturday.

The Imperial Economic Conference

The Imperial Economic Conference, shortly to be convened at Ottawa, is unquestionably one of the most important gatherings ever called in the history of the British Empire. In fact it may easily prove to be one of the most important in the economic history of the whole world, because, whatever decisions it may reach will affect not only the British Commonwealth of Nations, but all nations.

There will be assembled together all the leading governing statesmen of the Empire, supported by the strongest possible groups of financial, economic, commercial and other experts that the Old Country and each of the Dominions can gather together. For months past these statesmen and experts, assisted by small armies of lesser experts and advisers, have been compiling and studying trade and monetary statistics, weighing the effect of this and that, probing as never before into the productive capacities, primary and industrial, of their countries, the natural resources, the state of employment, the requirements of their respective populations, the probable and possible trend of future developments and the extent thereof, and the effect of existing policies and possible future policies upon all these matters which enter into national and Empire growth, prosperity and strength.

And the object of it all is to evolve, if possible, new policies applicable to all parts of the Empire, and which will prove of mutual advantage to all, and having as their objective the encouragement and development of a larger volume of inter-Empire trade. This means that the possibilities and the requirements of each part of the Empire must be ascertained, must be appreciated by all the other parts, and the whole dovetailed together to the advantage not only of each component part, but of the whole.

It becomes at once self-evident, therefore, that one of the major tasks confronting the Conference will be to find ways and means of removing existing barriers to the free exchange of commodities between one part of the Empire and other parts, to the mutual advantage of both, and without, in the process, working injury to any part. While the Old Country representatives, and the representatives of each of the Dominions must, of necessity, give particular need to the interests of their respective nations, it is an essential to the success of the Conference that this be done in no narrow, selfish spirit, but in such a way that while bettering their own country they likewise confer benefits on the sister nations.

This does not mean that the spirit of approach to the intricate problems calling for solution should be one of making sacrifices; rather it should be in the direction of striving for mutual advantages. In fact the word "sacrifice" should be entirely absent from the Conference, while the term "mutual advantage" should be very much to the fore. In a word, the dominating ideal should not be that expressed in such slogans as "Britain First," "Canada First," "Australia First," but, on the contrary, it should be an adaptation of the motto of the Three Musketeers, "All for One and One for All."

Along with the removal of existing barriers, and a mutual understanding or agreement that no new barriers will be erected, there must naturally develop policies designed to make ever easier the flow of trade into and out of all parts of the Empire to all other parts. This may involve the ultimate creation of a new system or method of monetary exchange, even an Empire currency. It would seem to be essential that some system be developed whereby the currency of any one part of the Empire should always be on a par with the currency of all other parts. In a word, that the same monetary standard should apply at all times throughout the Empire, and that, for example, at no time should the Canadian dollar be at a discount with the British pound, or vice versa. The guarantee of such a standard would undoubtedly be of tremendous assistance in establishing and maintaining inter-Empire trade at a maximum, removing, as it would, much of the uncertainty and loss which now prevails.

If the forthcoming Conference can achieve a measure of success along these and other lines having the same general object in view the beneficial effect, upon all parts of the British Empire will be almost incalculable. Not only so, but all other trading nations could afford to ignore such a development. The breaking down of trade barriers in the Empire would quickly force the breaking down of trade barriers by all other nations. It would be the beginning of a reversal of the suicidal policy into which the world has drifted and which has resulted in an almost complete paralysis, or destruction, of international trade and commerce, ending in the present state of world depression, unemployment, suffering and hardship.

Canadians may well be proud if, from their national capital, there is evolved a new economic policy for their Empire and the world. That this should emerge from the Conference should be, and we believe is, the fervent desire and hope of the Canadian people prospective of any minor political differences of adherence to special schools of economic or fiscal thought.

Earth Upheaval

Contour Of Island In Bering Sea Is Changed

An isolated Bering sea island, populated only by a herd of immense sea lions and great flocks of birds, Boganof, has, again, Father Bernard R. Hubbard what he declares to be proof of how volcanic islands "grow."

A great steaming mound of lava, he said in a message sent to Seward, has been pushed out of the earth and has changed the contour of one section of the island completely. The mass is apparently increasing in size.

The "growth" is taking place, the Santa Clara University professor messaged, at a place where formerly a sheltered harbor existed.

His observations were made on a voyage from Bristol Bay with the party on the motor-ship "Polar Bear."

Despite storms and high seas, a successful landing was made.

No Fool-Proof Rule

Mushroom Hunter Must Depend On His Own Judgment

The public's desire for a fool-proof rule by which to distinguish an edible mushroom from a poisonous one is doomed to unfulfillment. Dr. Fred Seaver, curator of the New York Botanical Gardens, said in a lecture at New York.

"There is no such rule," he stated. "One must learn to know the mushrooms and to distinguish them as you would your friends from your enemies."

Dr. Seaver said that to the mycologist, or student of fungi, there was no significance in terms "toadstool" and "mushroom."

"A mushroom is an edible toadstool or a toadstool is a poisonous mushroom, whichever way one may wish to put it."

Waited Many Years

Women Graduated Over Half Century Ago Just Received Diploma

An 85-year-old woman, who waited 62 years for her diploma, received it at Bates College yesterday. The woman was Mrs. Sibyl Chase Ballard, of Minneapolis, Minn., who completed her course at Bates in 1867, but failed to receive her degree because the college did not then confer them on women. Bates now is a co-educational institution.

Unless doctors are expelled from the system, no child can be healthy. Mother Graham Worm Exterminator is an excellent medicine to destroy worms.

Reduced Freight Rates

Lower Rates For Livestock In Quantities Less Than Full Carload

Reduced freight rates for the movement of livestock in quantities less than full carloads are being established by the railways, according to an announcement made by the Canadian Freight Association. Hereafter a livestock shipper has been required to ship or pay for 20,000 lbs. in the case of cattle, and 16,000 lbs. in the case of hogs and sheep in order to ship under the carload rates.

The new schedule will provide for additional rates subject to minimum weights of 12,000 lbs. and 6,000 lbs. in the case of cattle, and 11,000 lbs. and 6,000 lbs. in the case of hogs and sheep. The rates for the smaller car loads are somewhat higher than for the full cars, but they will give the shipper, who has not sufficient stock available to make up full cars, an opportunity of getting the smaller quantities to the markets by rail.

The new rates will apply to market centres from points in the prairie provinces within a radius of 200 miles.

It will be permissible for cars to be stopped at one intermediate point in transit for completion of load at a charge of $3.00 per car. In making the announcement, the Canadian Freight Association stated that the new rates are in the nature of an experiment for one year.

A Prison De Luxe

New York Has Last Word In Detention Houses

New York papers gave a new bit of space the other day to the opening of a new prison. It was in fact, a considerable social event, and one of the reporter wrote that "the list of guests would do credit to one of society's best publicized debutantes." This, it appears, is a sort of prison de luxe. Erected on Manhattan's Welfare Island, it is to be a house of detention for women, and, judging from the description, it will never be much bothered by attempted escapes. Hot and cold water in every cell, shower baths, metal mirrors, a radio in every ward, the blessed peace sounds as palpable as one of Canada's new abolition cars.

40th Anniversary Of Salada Tea Company

Forty years ago this month in an unpretentious little building on Front Street in Toronto, the Salada Tea Company packed its first pound of tea. Founded in 1892 by the late Honourable Peter Larkin, the business progressed very rapidly and by 1895 a branch had been opened in Montreal. Two years later the United States market was invaded and an office opened in Buffalo. To-day, three of the largest and finest warehouses in the world, devoted exclusively to the packing of tea, stand as a memorial to the founder who located in Toronto, Montreal, and in Boston (the scene of the memorable tea party which precipitated the Revolutionary War).

The Canadian market was then controlled by China and Japan teas, the largest sale being China tea of poor quality. These teas were being sold from chests, exposed to air, dust, dampness, foreign odours, and so forth, all detrimental to the quality of tea. In England, which was and still is the greatest tea-drinking country in the world, Ceylon and Indian teas of fine quality had practically displaced China teas, and it occurred to Larkin that Canadians also would prefer these finer teas. He consequently introduced a Ceylon and Indian blend to this Continent. He then conceived the idea of packing it in metal packages, in order that it would reach the consumer intact, with its flavour and quality unimpaired by dampness, store odours, etc. This step revolutionized the tea market on this Continent.

He sought a name for his product and decided on "SALADA," which was the name of an old Indian tea garden. All that was left now was to tell the public about it. He wisely decided that the quickest and cheapest way to do this was by means of the newspaper. The result was so gratifying that he continued to use the newspapers as his chief advertising policy from that day.

He strove always to give the public the finest quality tea he could at the price and then advertise it for all he was worth. His achievement is the largest selling package tea in North America.

Disarmament Responsibility For Its Ultimate Solution Rests Primarily With the Great Powers

Disarmament was a political problem and the responsibility for its solution rested primarily with the great powers, Sir George Perley, declared at Ottawa. Sir George, who headed the Canadian delegation to the Geneva disarmament conference, was addressing a joint gathering of the Ottawa branch of the League of Nations Society, the National Council of Women, the Women's Canadian Club of Ottawa, and the Canadian Club of Ottawa. Efforts towards that end, he stated, had been initiated and carried on at Geneva by private conversations among the representatives of the nations chiefly concerned. Many things had occurred to interfere with and prevent the success of the recent deliberations. There were the elections in France; the illness of Premier Ramsay MacDonald; the necessity of United States Secretary of State Stimson returning to his country; the precarious position of the then German Chancellor Herr Brüning which had only recently resulted in his resignation. Much had been done in spite of circumstances, Sir George said in voicing his belief in the work of disarmament and the League of Nations.

A most important resolution on qualitative disarmament had been passed at the Geneva gathering by unanimous vote to the effect that any armaments which were found to be either aggressive in character or particularly dangerous to the civilian population should be removed from national control.

The technical work of the conference was still progressing, Sir George stated, and political conversations would be resumed later when it was hoped additional would be more propitious for further progress towards the objective which all so greatly desired.

"Education and not emotionalism must be the broad, fundamental basis for the development of international peace will leading to permanent peace and to disarmament," declared Miss Winnifred Kydd, Montreal, president of the National Council of Women of Canada, and one of Canada's three delegates to the conference.

Miss Kydd dealt with the preliminary work of the Conference sub-committee on moral disarmament, of which she was a member, having as its object an intense study of how the public opinion of all countries of the world may be mobilized in the interests of peace. The moral disarmament committee, Miss Kydd indicated, intends to utilize the press, the radio and the moving picture in its peace propaganda work.

Referring to the presentation of the petition for world disarmament at the conference, Miss Kydd stated that the Canadian petition, bearing 500,000 names, was given a prominent place when the petitions from all countries were placed on display.

Still Ding Good Business

That the horse has not been replaced by machinery on modern farms is shown by the fact that the Canada Wood Specialty Company of St. Marys, Ontario, is now filling an order for 75,000 curly comb handles. The curly comb is used principally for cleaning horses, though quite a supply goes to fishermen. An average of about 500,000 are sold annually in Canada.

Making Final Test

Rust-Resistant Varieties of Wheat Being Tried Out

For the purpose of considering and advising upon the solution of urgent problems of agriculture in all the major divisions of Canada—the Maritimes, Quebec and Ontario, the prairies and British Columbia, the newly-formed national advisory committee on agriculture of the National Research Council met in Ottawa.

Dr. H. M. Tivy, president of the council, stressed the need of co-operation and coordination in working out national problems.

Dr. Robert Newton, acting director of the division of biology and agriculture, recounted the enormous progress made in the last decade, through research organizations working in co-operation.

He stated that rust-resistant varieties of wheat from all the agencies which developed them have been pooled for final test. Those selected are being tried out at numerous points, and the resulting grain is to be studied by laboratories of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the three provincial universities in the west.

The grain research committee since its formation has undertaken several major special investigations. Dr. Newton said there was now in press the final report on the investigation of the drying of grain "which should clear up all points likely to arise."

Numerous complaints regarding the effect of the combine method of harvesting on grain have resulted in the inauguration of an elaborate investigation.

Refitting Old Vessel

Clipper Ship Built in 1876 Will Sail Next Again

The day of wooden ships and iron men has not gone by yet.

The bark "Cordellius," once "Queen of the Jute Clippers," has sailed for Bath, Me., to be fitted out in the same powerful square rig in which she established a sailing record between London and Calcutta years ago.

Refitted, the then full rigged clipper ship will sail out of Boston to again engage in trade with Africa.

She has sailed under six flags over the seven seas. Her poop has churned waters of the Arctic and the tropics and she has survived hurricanes and fire at sea to become last of the old New England clipper ships still in service.

A syndicate headed by C. Nelson Rogers of Boston recently purchased her and she will return to that port immediately after her new spars have stepped into place at the Bath Iron Works, Bath, Me. At Boston she will take on a cargo for a trading voyage to Africa.

She was built at Dumbarton, Scotland, in 1876, and was awarded a gold medal by the Honorable Shipwrights' Guild of London for the most beautiful lines of any clipper ship then afloat. The "Cordellius" established a record of 69 days between London and Calcutta and the record has never been lowered by a sailing ship.

In recent years she has engaged in the packet trade between New Bedford and the Cape Verde Islands.

Interesting Discovery By Archeologist

Finds Another Secret Passage In Old Palestine City

Sir Flinders Petrie, the veteran archeologist who has unearthed so many of the secrets of the past, is still actively excavating at Old Gaza, the great city of Palestine which was well known to Abraham. The latest announcement in connection with his work is the discovery of another secret passage leading from the city out into the desert. A great tunnel, leading under the walls and nearly 500 yards out into the desert, was found last year, and constitutes but one of the many features of the fortified city which military experts do not yet fully understand. Sir Flinders estimates that it will take another 50 years to excavate the area yet to be explored.

QUEEN MARY ADMIRES BEAUTIFUL SHOW

One of the annual events in London which their Majesties never miss is the Chelsea Flower Show, where some of the most beautiful floral displays in the British Isles are on view. This photograph was taken as Her Majesty left the Royal Party to admire a particularly attractive corner of the show.

Emissaries Of Scottish Commerce Receive Splendid Reception On Their Recent Visit To Canada

When the emissaries of Scottish commerce and industry came to Canada recently, they found the opportunities for developing markets here so much more promising than was anticipated that some fifty per cent. of them extended their stay from the scheduled five days—May 16 to 21—to several weeks. Homebound bound, therefore, the Scottish Trade Mission mustered a greatly reduced personnel, some of those who remained behind having decided to traverse the Dominion to Vancouver, others to further cultivate and solidify valuable connections made in the St. Lawrence port city.

Nor did all the exhibits so carefully selected and arranged to impress the Canadian public with the quality of Scotland's products return to the warehouses of Glasgow. A number of the exhibitors made direct sales of all the stocks they brought with them for show purposes. The representative of Mr. Robert Chapman, dog fancier, set the pace in this field, disposing of the dozen aristocratic Scotch terriers which he brought over on the first afternoon that the exhibition was open to the public.

Direct sales were of course a small factor in the success of the Trade Mission, nor did exports booked constitute the most significant feature of the venture from the point of view of Scottish commerce. The visiting traders, all keen business men trained in a hard school, were quick to realize that the Dominion held for them big opportunities for future business. They found that Canada was a potential buyer worth courting. "Scotland has found that the day of the buyer going to the seller is past and that the seller must come to the buyer," commented Mr. A. M. Wiseman, British Government Trade Commissioner at Toronto, when asked his opinion as to the most significant result of the Trade Mission visit.

But the discoveries were not all for the visiting Canadians, not only the general public which regarded the exhibition primarily as a colourful spectacle, but hard-headed business men who visited it to weigh values both of goods and men, were convinced that Scotland produces certain commodities in higher quality than can Canadian producers, at present at least, and that these commodities fill a legitimate demand in the Canadian market without unduly prejudicing native products. They heard that if they would continue to sell farm produce, raw materials and certain manufactured goods to Scotland, they should also be ready to buy these goods for the production of which the old land is particularly suited, either through natural conditions, such as climate or the long experience of her craftsmen handed down from father to son for generations.

Mr. James Craig, president of Colville's Limited, a famous Scottish industrial firm, emphasized this last point in an address to Montreal business men gathered to welcome the mission.

"The trade between Montreal and Glasgow cannot continue a one-way traffic," he stated. "All that historic trade is a reciprocal trade. Canadians must realize that they have to buy in Glasgow if they would continue to sell there."

Those in charge were not merely business men, anxious to seize on any possibilities of a sale. They were representatives of the old historic Scotland, eager to tell her romantic story, to welcome those of Scottish descent, and they were legion, and gave their news of home. Afternoon and evening they were besieged by men and women who sought help in locating the tartan worn by their forefathers. They became the centres of impromptu reunions of Scotch-Canadians, many of whom allowed the highland accent to regain temporarily a dominance in their speech which it had lost long ago.

Referring to this cordial atmosphere, a remark made by Mr. Wiseman, British Trade Commissioner at Toronto, who was sent over to Scotland to cross the ocean with the Trade Mission and was closely associated with it throughout its stay here is significant.

"Had the mission come here purely on a hard business basis it would not have met with anything like the success it attained," he commented in the course of a personal interview. "It was lifted to a higher plane by the spirit in which it set out and the spirit in which it was received here. It may be said that the spirit of Scotland was strikingly personified in the honorary president of the mission. His Grace the Duke of Montrose, whose presence contributed greatly to the splendid impression left in Canada by the Scottish Trade Mission."

Clad in kilts and sporrans and the plaid of the ancient clan of Graham and wearing, among other insignia, that of the Knights of Nova Scotia, indicating the part which his ancestors played in the colonization of Canada three centuries ago, the Duke captivated Canadian business men when the members of the mission were hosts to leading Montrealers and statesmen and trade officials from the Dominion capital. Norfolk Fishermen Are Superstitious

Chain Weather-Vane Depicting Crow Brings Bad Luck

Manners are notoriously superstitious.

The local governing council of Cromer, the agreeable little township on the Norfolk coast, in respecting the superstition of the local fishermen in regard to a weather-vane depicting a large crow which was erected recently by the council. The fishermen say the weather has been consistently bad since the vane was put up, and they have not been able to catch so many crabs and lobsters. The crew, they assert, is "a bad lot of ill-fated men," and an emblem of death.

In consequence of these representations the vane is to be taken down and a new one depicting a ship in full sail is to be set up.

Small Moths, Beet Webworms.By E. H. STRICKLAND, University of Alberta.

Every day our mail contains requests for information regarding the habits of the small, light-brown moths that are apparently swarming along the sides of roads in almost every district in the northern half of Alberta.

Since, if the season is favorable to them, many people will soon be encountering the caterpillars from the eggs that have been laid by the moths, it is as well that everyone familiarizes himself at once with their appearance, habits and control.

The moths have laid enormous numbers of eggs on the leaves of various plants, particularly those of weeds such as lamb's quarters. From these will hatch small greenish-yellow caterpillars with conspicuous black stripes and circles on their bodies. When they are very numerous, and there is every indication that they will be extremely numerous this year, they soon devour all the plants on which the eggs were laid. They then move across country in dense armies in search of more food.

Food of Beet Webworms:

Fortunately for grain producers, beet webworms WILL NOT EAT WHEAT. They hardly touch oats or barley. When an army of them passes through a grainfield they will destroy every weed in their line of march. Whatever harm they do elsewhere they more than offset this damage by thoroughly cleaning the grainfields of weeds.

Apart from grains and grasses they are, however, general feeders. They derive their name of beet webworm from the fact that an army which passes through a sugarbeet field leaves nothing but ruin in its wake. Flax, clover, alfalfa and sunflowers are similarly eaten to the ground.

Possibly it is gardens that suffer most severely. Practically no garden produce is immune from them. An army makes a clean sweep of everything, with the possible exception of tomatoes. Fortunately they do not eat potatoes very readily when any other food is available.

Control Measures:

When an army of webworms starts to march, nothing will deter them from continuing along the line they have chosen. We have seen an entire army enter and drown in a horsetrough that was in their line of march, and another ascend a three-story building, go over the roof and down on the other side. Trains have frequently been stopped in Alberta by armies that were crossing the track.

If an army is entering a garden, steps should be taken immediately to destroy them before many of them have taken possession, or it will be almost impossible to save anything.

Poisoned Bait in Furrows:

Plough a deep furrow along the threatened side and immediately treat furrow with poisoned bait. Ordinary poisoned bran as employed for the cutworm is effective, but a cheaper and more effective bait can be made from any favorite food plant: Pull about 50 lbs. of weeds, such as lamb's quarters, sprinkle them with sufficient water to moisten them thoroughly and dust over the heap

1 lb. White Arsenic or Paris Green. Turn over the heap of weeds constantly with a fork during and after the addition of the poison till you are sure that it is all coated with poison.

The bait is now ready for application to the furrow, along the bottom of which the plants should be evenly scattered.

Few caterpillars that enter the poisoned furrow will leave it without feeding, but if they are extremely numerous a second baited furrow should be prepared at a distance of about a rod from the first.

Bait should be replenished when it becomes too dry to be attractive.

Spraying or dusting:

If caterpillars are already present in large numbers in a field of alfalfa, clover, flax or potatoes, it may be necessary to augment the furrows with spraying or dusting. Spray formula: Paris Green 3 lbs.; lime 3 lbs.; water 100 gals. Dust formula: Paris Green 1 lb.; lime 10 lbs. Methods of applying dust can be obtained by writing the Dept. of Extension, University, Edmonton.

Number of Generations:

Normally there are two generations of beet webworms in a year. The first migrating armies can be expected in July and the second late in August. Under favorable climatic conditions the second generation is much more numerous than the first.

The winter is passed in small cocoons that look like earth-covered pieces of root, about an inch long and placed vertically just beneath the surface of the soil. These are likely to be very conspicuous during the coming fall.

Not Much Difference

Vegetarians Healthy But Show In Operating Body Heat

Experiment running over two years has been conducted at Kansas City where a professor has been observing to vegetarians and comparing them with meat eaters. He finds that the vegetarians do not generate body heat and energy as quickly as meat eaters, placing the difference at 16 per cent. The vegetarians, he said, do not appear to be more active or intelligent than any others nor are they more apt to become sick. Apart from generation of heat he could see little difference in the two plans of diet.

New Discovery Valuable

Makes It Possible To Evaporate Platinum Like Water

Platinum is caused to evaporate like water by a discovery announced from the California Institute of Technology. This precious vapor, probably the world's highest-priced mist, condenses into unimpaired thin films upon a wide variety of materials. It coats them virtually permanently. Smoother than dew it will cover fibres, converting them into pliant, filmy threads that seem made of pure platinum.

A BOOK TO SUEVE WOMEN—THE ADJUSTABLE SLIP

Its wrap-over front makes it shadow proof.

There isn't anything more essential for a slender appearance than a well-fitting costume slip.

Today's model reduces the breadth of the figure and does it gracefully. There is a narrow sash that slips through a bound opening at the right hand side of the front. It is brought around the back and tied in a bow, adjusting the slip to suit its wearer. The wrap-over fronts allow plenty of freedom for the neckline, and still retain the straightness of the slip.

And to make it! You'll be amazed at its simplicity. Cut it out and practically only edges to be bound, after the sides and shoulder seams are closed.

Style No. 522 is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material.

Price of pattern 25 cents in stamps or coin (check is preferred). Wrap over carefully.

Contract Bridge

By Hamlin B. Hatch, Cavendish Club, Toronto

In my last article, I discussed the Official System of Contract Bridge from the standpoint of the fundamental differences between it and the Approach-Forcing System. Today's article has to do with the so-called One-Over-One variation of both these systems. The One-Over-One has been developed by Geo. Roth of the Knickerbocker Whist Club, New York. Many of the members of the club have assisted in bringing this system to its present state of excellence. The Four Horsemen of Bridge, i.e. Hal Sims, David Burnette, Wilford Kern, and Oswald Jacoby use this system and have won many national and sectional championships. Whether their winning has been due to the One-Over-One or to the fact that all four of these men are master players, is not certain. However, it is probable that the system has helped them materially in their successes.

The salient features of the One-Over-One are as follows:—

1. The Opening Bid of One has practically the same minimum requirements as The Approach-Forcing System, with the exception that with strong distributional hands, i.e. two suits, the bidding may be opened with less than two and one-half honours or tricks. An example of this opening would be the following:—Spades A J 8 7, Hearts K Q X X X, Diamonds X, Clubs X.

2nd. Provided there is no intervening bid and the partner of the opening bidder responds with a bid of one or other than one no trump, this response is definitely forcing and demands that the original bidder keeps the bidding open for at least one more round. The difference between the Approach-Forcing and the One-Over-One is, that any bid which is forcing in the Approach-Forcing System requires that the bidding be kept open until a game contract is arrived at while the One-Over-One force simply requires that the bidding be kept open for at least one more round.

Example: If the opening bidder bids one diamond and second hand passes, then if the opening bidder's partner bids one heart, the original bidder must bid again. The advantages claimed for this system by its advocates is that the partners inform each other of their respective holdings at low bids, and also that this bidding conceals from the opponents both the strength and weakness of the bidding hands. Where the hands are strong, there is always the chance that the opponents will make a defensive bid and find themselves caught between the upper and nether millstones with the result that they suffer a substantial penalty.

3. The opening bid of two in a suit is based on losing tricks and not on honour tricks. In other words, a two bid is made on hands which definitely assure the partnership of game even if the partner of the two bidder has a complete "bust." The type of hands which lend themselves to this bid are usually powerful two-suiters or a very powerful one-suiters. Example: Spades A Q J X X X, Hearts A K X X X X, Diamonds—None, Clubs X. In this hand even with a six spot high in partners hand, game is assured, as the original bidder has only three losing tricks.

3. The opening bid of three in a suit is the opening bid signal. It is a stronger bid than the two bid and demands that the partner of the three bidder bid a suit of which he has the ace. If he has no ace, he makes the conventional response of three no trump.

Example: Spades A R Q J X X, Hearts K Q, Diamonds X, Clubs A K Q X. If after a three spade bid the response is four diamonds slam is definitely assured in spades. This is the only situation in any of the systems so far discussed, where ace showing is countenanced.

4. In all other situations except those outlined above, the One-Over-One has no variations of consequence from the Approach-Forcing System. The weak no trump response is used to show a balanced one to two trick hand. All no trump bids other than jump no trump and original no trump are used to definitely measure your quick trick strength and in almost every case the no trump bid shows a minimum holding. However, in the One-Over-One, many users of the system make an opening bid of one no trump on a strong hand. If one no trump is bid and partner responds with two no trump the original bidder guarantees enough extra value to rebid to three. In other words the contract is either one no trump or three no trump. The hand, provided there is no adverse bids, is never played at two no trump. In suit bids if the opening bid is one heart and partner responds with two hearts the original bidder either passes or bids four hearts, never three. In major suits therefore where no interference bidding occurs, the contract is either two or four. In the minors it is either two or five.

It is probable that the intelligent use of this system requires greater experience than the use of the other systems. It is certain, however, that in the mild test of keen duplicate competition, the users of this system have been extremely successful. Whether their winning is due to the system or to the fact that they are master players is, among users of other systems, a mooted question. The next article will deal with variations and their variations.

New South Wales Bandits Out After Big Booty

These are days of mysterious accidents, peculiar robberies and dastardly crimes of all descriptions. But one could not help but smile at the news despatch from Sydney, N.S.W. There bandits stole a brick wall 30 feet long and six feet high. Others took 20 locomotives all excepting the frames, while still others carried off part of a church. This story is somewhat along the lines of one of the "rackets" in the United States where high-pressure thieves will back a moving-van up to a home or an apartment and if nobody stops them, take the entire furnishings in one trip.

Keeping one's possessions is not as easy as it used to be, not even as easy as in the days when night meant right.

NEURITIS HAS GONE!

Banished by Kruschen

"I had acute neuritis in the shoulder and left arm, due to exposure in bad weather," writes the Hon. H. E. P. "It was impossible to lift the arm to dress or to use it in any way, and, of course, the pain was dreadful. All external applications were useless. I got it completely normal again by keeping the parts affected warm and taking daily, early in the morning, Kruschen Salts in a tumbler of hot water. It took nearly a month, but every vestige of neuritis has gone."

Neuritis is typical of a dozen other complaints—some minor, some very serious—which all result from impurities in the blood. And it is impure blood, circulating all over the system and setting up inflammation in the tissues, that causes those excruciating pains.

Kruschen Salts can be safely trusted to set the matter right. Because Kruschen contains just what Nature needs to persuade your internal organs back into a healthy, normal condition.

In Search Of Treasure

British Adventurers Locate Sunk Spanish Galleon In Southern Seas

A band of British adventurers who are seeking Spanish treasure made contact, recently, with a galleon on the bed of Chaguanaram Bay, Trinidad, which, they hoped was crammed with gold ingots and precious jewels.

The operation had been directed by a "divining spring" owned by Frank Cooper, one of the leaders of the group, who crossed the Atlantic recently in the "Vigilant," a tiny vessel, in the hope of making a great fortune.

It was reported that as the "Vigilant" was circling over the bay, the "divining spring," held in Cooper's clenched hands, leaped from his grasp.

Chaguanaram Bay has long been looked upon as a place where treasure might be found. It was there that the Spanish were defeated by the British in a decisive naval engagement near the end of the eighteenth century. The legend is that the Spanish fleet contained one vessel loaded to the rails with gold and gems.

Jail Population Less

Alberta Penal Institutions Have Fewer Inmates Than For Some Time

Alberta jails have at present a smaller population than for some years past, it is found. Hon. G. L. McPherson, Minister of Public works.

The decrease in jail population in Alberta is the more satisfactory, the minister remarks, in view of the fact that it is reported from Regina that the Saskatchewan jails are filled at the same time. A report from the same quarter indicates also that the policy of granting prisoners remission on their sentences, in consideration of good behaviour, is to be adopted. This method has been in vogue in Alberta, Mr. McPherson says, for a considerable time, sentences being shortened on the basis of four days per month in cases found to be deserving of such leniency.

Carries Stock In Clothes

Montreal Pedlar Hangs Articles On Hooks Inside His Coat

Many stores, usually found on the waterfront, lay claim to being stocked with "everything from an anchor to a needle."

Ezra Goldfazer, a pedlar, who piles his trade in the central part of Montreal, carries his stock right on his person and is able to supply large enough to meet the requirements of all customers. But he has no anchors for sale, and the probable reason is because of his seventy years! For eighty years now Ezra has strolled to taverns and restaurants, opened his "stock" displayed hanging from hooks thereon, articles ranging from rubber bands to shaving paraphernalia. His stock seems inexhaustible.

Rheumatism So Bad He Had to Quit Work

Albert Berger Not Bothered Since Relieved by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Working Every Day Now.

I had to stop working and stay in the house. I was two weeks in bed, when a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I gave the Pills a fair trial, and they relieved me right away. My back is good and strong now, and I am working every day. I have never been bothered with rheumatism since. I recommend them for anyone suffering from Rheumatism, Lamé Back, Sciatica, Rheumatism and kindred ailments (thin blood). Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich the blood stream and create new red blood cells, which is the reason they are so successful in combating such ailments. Equally good for all run-down or nervously exhausted people. Try them. At your druggist's, 50c, 2/3.

THE HOUSE OF DREAMS-COME-TRUE

BY MARGARET FIEDLER

Author of "The Splendid Folly," "The Hermit of the Hill," "The House of Dreams-Come-True," "Hodder & Stoughton, Ltd., London."

"Then, to please me for nothing else in the world, if you like, but because I ask it, will you let things stay as they are for a few weeks longer? Just that little while, Nick? We're going to London next week. That'll make a break—bring us all back to a calmer, more everyday outlook on things. Will you wait? Sir Adrian may never strike Claire again. And it wouldn't be fair—just now, at a time when she is feeling horribly bitter and humiliated from that—that insult—to ask her to go away with you. Give her a fair chance to decide a big question like that when things are at their normal level—not when they are worse than usual. To ask her now would be to take advantage of the feeling she must have, just at this moment, that her life is unbearable. It wouldn't be playing the game."

He made no answer, and Jean waited with increasing trepidation. She was sure now that she could hear footsteps. Someone had mounted the stairs and was coming along the corridor towards her room.

"Nick!" The low, agitated whisper burst from her as the steps halted outside the door. "Promise me!"

It seemed an eternity before he answered.

"Very well, I promise. You've won for the moment—Saint Jean!"

He smiled at her, rather sadly. Before she could reply, Blaise's voice sounded outside the door, asking if he might come in, and with a feeling of intense relief that the battle was won for the moment, Jean gave the required permission. As his brother entered the room, Nick greeted it, brushing past him abruptly.

Tormarin's eyes questioned Jean's. "We have been discussing Sir Adrian," she explained, as the door closed behind Nick. "And—and Claire."

He nodded comprehendingly.

"Poor old Nick!" he said. "It's damned rough on him. Lettiner ought to be carefully and quietly chloroformed out of the way. He's as much a menace to society as a mad dog."

Jean sighed.

"I'm afraid they're very unhappy—Nick and Claire."

"I wonder Claire doesn't chuck her husband," said Blaise. "And take whatever of happiness she can get out of the world."

Jean shook her head.

"You know you don't mean that. You don't really believe in snatching happiness—at all costs."

"I'd let precious little stand in the way. If I were Nick I think I should do it."

"But being you?"

Jean did not know what unaccountable impulse induced her to give a personal and individual twist to what had been developing almost into an academic discussion. Perhaps it was the familiar, unswerving longing to hear Blaise himself define the thing which kept them apart—even though, since Lady Anne's disclosure, she could guess only too well what it was. Or perhaps it was the faint, tormenting hope that one day his determining will would weaken and his love sweep away all barriers.

He looked at contemplatively.

"Sometimes the past makes claims upon a man which forbid him to snatch at happiness. I don't believe in any man's shirking his just punishment for the evil he has done. That he has brought on himself, that he must bear. But Nick and Claire have had no part in bringing about their own tragedy. They are just the sport of chance—of an ill fate. They are morally free to take their happiness in a way in which I shall never be able to take mine as long as I live."

He regarded her steadily. "There are certain things for which I have proved myself unflinching—by which it is evident I am not to be trusted. And one of those is the safeguarding of any woman's happiness."

Jean felt her throat contract. It would always be the same, then. The long tentacles of the past would reach out eternally into the future. The woman who had been his wife—the woman who had destroyed herself and in so doing, hanged a multitude of remorse about his neck—would stand forever at the gateway of the garden of happiness, her dead lips silently denying him—and with him, the woman who loved him—the right to enter.

With an effort Jean answered that part of his speech which had reference only to Claire and Nick.

"There are other ways, though, in which they have no moral right. I grant that Claire was persecuted, almost driven into marrying Sir Adrian by her parents; but, after all, we each have our individual free will. She could have refused to marry them. Or, if she felt there were reasons why she must marry him the material advantage to her parents, and so on, why, she ought to have reckoned the cost. I don't mean to be hard, Blaise. She broke up satisfactorily."

"You, hard!" He laughed a little as though amused.

"Only—only one must try to be fair all round—to look at things straight."

It pays in pleasure—and pays in actual cash.

She leaned her chin on her palm and her eyes grew thoughtful. "I don't know, but it seems to me that we haven't meant to run away from things—hard things. If a man and a woman marry, they must accept their responsibilities—not evade them."

So absorbed was she in her trend of thought that she never realized how directly this speech must strike at Blaise himself. His face changed slightly.

"You're right, of course," he said abruptly. "You—generally are. And if all women were like you, it would be easy enough."

His eyes dwelt with curious intensity on the pure outline of her face, on the parted, tenderly curved lips, and the golden eyes with their momentary touch of the idealist and the dreamer.

It seemed as if the quiet intensity of his regard drew her, for slowly she turned her head and met his gaze, flushing suddenly and faltering under it. The consciousness of him, of his nearness, awoke her from head to foot, and it seemed to her as though now, in this moment, they were in closer touch, nearer understanding, than they had ever been.

The dreamer and idealist vanished and it was all at once just sheer woman, passionate and wilful and tremulous, and infinitely alluring, that looked at him out of the golden eyes. With a stifled exclamation he caught her hands in his.

"Beloved—"

And the whole of a man's forbidden, thwarted love vibrated in the word as he spoke it.

Then he bent his head, and for a moment his lips were against her soft palm.

She stood very still and quiet when he had gone, realizing in every quivering nerve of her that whatsoever the future might bring—even though Blaise might choose to shut himself away from her again as in the past and the dividing wall between them rise as high as heaven—she knew now, without a shadow of doubt or questioning, that he loved her.

In the burning utterance of a single word in the pressure of passionate, renouncing lips, the assurance had been given, and nothing could ever take it away again.

She spread her hands, palms upward, and looked at them curiously.

CHAPTER XXIV.

An Unexpected Meeting

"Have you been very bored, Nick?" The week in London had nearly run its course, and Lady Anne's eyes begged charmingly for a negative. Nick answered it with a smile.

"I'm never bored with you, madam; you know that," he said. "And hotel life is always more or less amusing. One comes across such queer types. There's one here this evening has been intriguing me enormously. At a little table by herself—do you see her? A tall, rather gorgeous-looking being—kind of cross between the Queen of Sheba and Lucrèce Borgia."

Lady Anne threw a veiled glance in the direction indicated.

"Yes, she's a very handsome woman, obviously not English." Her eyes travelled onwards towards the door. "If wish Blaise and Jean would hurry up," she added impatiently. "They're taking an unconscionable time to dress."

The two ladies had come in late from a sight-seeing expedition undertaken on Jean's behalf, and had only returned to the hotel just as Lady Anne and Nick were preparing to make their way in to dinner.

"For such a deliberate match-maker, you're a bit too impatient, madam," commented Nick, teasingly. "That they should have stayed out together until the very last moment ought to have pleased you immensely."

Lady Anne made a small grimace.

"I'm not contented."

Splendid Empire Achievements

An enterprising Sydney, N.S.W., newspaper, in order to convey to its readers the magnitude of the huge new Harbour Bridge recently constructed at the Australian port, printed the composite picture shown above for the enlightenment of its readers.

Filled by descriptive stories of the new Canadian Pacific liner "Empress of Britain" that appeared in Australian papers when that giant liner was sped on its maiden voyage last year by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, Australians have taken as proud an interest in the "Empress of Britain" as Canadians, and the picture, labelled "Empire Achievements" paid tribute to the enterprise of the Dominion and the Commonwealth.

Underneath was the legend, "Sydney Harbour Bridge, opened March, 1932. Length of Arch Span 1,559 feet, breadth 160 feet, weight of arch steelwork 25,000 tons. "Empress of Britain" in service May 1931, length 799 feet 6 inches, breadth 97 1/2 feet, gross registered tonnage 42,500."

The "Empress of Britain" on her voyage from Canada June 10th, 1932, justified Australia's faith in her as an Empire achievement by creating the magnificent new record, Father Point to Charbourg, in four days, seven hours, 53 minutes.

Both weather and crowd played a big part in the success of the Go-Getters' Picnic last Friday. Several senior teams played softball and the Didsbury High School team being victors. A few of the girls and boys from town played the Melvin girls, the town team being the winners. The Country Clowns and Go-Getter Junior Boys tied their score. One more inning was played, in which the boys succeeded in getting another run. The dance at night was also a great success, and we hope to have a bigger and better time on July 15th.

Police in some provinces of the Dominion find their courses in traffic education cannot always be assimilated by the motorist. A case in point in Ontario was made public about the time that the warnings for one-eyed driving were superseded by summonses. It was not the case of a warning being ignored, either. A motorist with one headlight was admonished and given the usual warning. He misunderstood, however, the constable's instructions to leave his license number, went to a garage and there took off his license plates, leaving them with the garage man. Soon afterwards, travelling without license plates, he was stopped by another constable and sent back to get the plates.
